The Service 1921

Anantara Chiang Mai Resort's splendid colonial house was built in 1915 on land owned by the British government and opened in 1921 as the British Consulate of Chiang Mai. Its construction was one of the first tasks undertaken by the then newly appointed Consul General, William Alfred Rae Wood, who arrived in Chiang Mai to find a fluctuating community of British, the majority of whom worked for British companies in the teak trade.

Designed for a tropical climate with spacious verandas to catch the river breeze and an unusual 22 yard footprint that is the exact length of a cricket pitch, the colonial house was the former home of the consul's family and housed a courtroom, offices, servants' quarters and stables for elephants. Welcoming a constant stream of visitors, British citizens in Chiang Mai came to pay their respects, register their presence, or seek help and advice. Drinks and meals were served in the consulate's dining room, many a game of croquet was played on the lawn, and parties for the British King or Queen's birthdays were social highlights of the year.

In an eccentric reinvention of these times, The Service 1921 Restaurant & Bar reimagines this colonial era by restoring the consulate as the residence of the British government's secret intelligence service. Although there is no record of secret intelligence activities being undertaken at the consulate at that time, the concept conjures an illusion of what such an experience might have been, while delighting guests with unique culinary journeys, filled with mystery and intrigue...
